Going to Philippines.

Hon William A. Jones, the representative in Congress from the First Virginia District, has returned with his family from the national capital, and is now at his home in Warsaw. Mr. Jones, who is the ranking Democratic member on the Committee of Insular Affairs, was recently appointed on a select committee of five to visit the Philippine Islands during the summer and make some investigation into the government of the Islands and report to the House of Representatives at its next session. Thus far there have appeared no signs of opposition to Mr. Jones in the general election next fall. The Republicans may, however, put up a candidate for the sake of keeping their policies before the voters with a view to future arrugales, but they can hardly hope to defeat Mr. Jones now, or even to reduce the usual Democratic majority in the district.

So far there has been no rain, and to protect the men if it comes the major has ordered that some old tents be nalled over the mess and kitchens. These old goods, Major Wortham comments, incidentally, have been in the State service a long time, and should be condemned anyway.

Further, Major Wortham does not like the army quartermaster's department, where he came near to getting bread for his men before starting on their day's work. Although tons of it were on hand, he was told it could not be issued until it got coid.

Illness still stays away from the Virginians. There were no duties for the Virginians to-day, and the troops rested after the exertions of yesterday. The only thing doing to-morrow will be the hig review of the entire division in the morning.

Otherwise the Fourth will be a holiday in camp, Many visitors are arriving.

Back of this bench are several others, providing in all for 100 newspaper men.

From this level around the ring the sections radiate outward and upward like spokes of a 'wagon wheel. There are eight of these wedge-shaped sees inches higher than the one in front, the last row rising thirty-five feet from the ground level. The seats do not run one behind the other, soldier fashion, but alternate so that the man behind looks down on the ring between the heads of the two directly in front of him. By this arrangement the ring will be flanked by a sloping wall of races and string eyes, circling the fighters on all stdes to a height of thirty feet. There will be no spaces and lines between them, just a solid wall of faces glaring down at the white square.

Between the press seats and the bleachers there is a gentle slope upon which approximately 5,000 chairs are grouped.
